

A Message from the Alumni Association President

Use Your Roots to Soar

My fellow alumni,

The dictionary defines camaraderie as “a spirit of friendly good-fellowship.”

During your time at Augustana, you likely developed great friendships with your roommates and classmates. But did you ever stop to think about how your Augustana roots have helped establish relationships for you after college?

At the Metro Deaf School in St. Paul, Minn., eight Augustana alumni are working together to serve students and their parents. They are: Kelley (Lindell) Cole ‘85; Janet (Eisfeld) Caven ‘03; Trisha Beseman ‘11; Chris (Sorensen) Thiers ‘74; Cheri Piemeisl ‘05; Erik Queen ‘05; Heidi (Lukin) Ernst ‘05; and Julie (Keimig) Al-Rai ‘88.

We had a chance to catch up with Kelley (Lindell) Cole, who says the Augustana bond she shares with her colleagues is a unique and special connection.

“When you find out someone else is from Augie there’s an instant rapport – an instant connection. You know their roots; so you expect great things. We know that Augie grads will meet great expectations and will measure up. We know they’ll be great teachers,” she said.

“It’s obvious the Augie Deaf Education program is getting stronger and stronger because the new teachers who come here are so well-prepared. They know the deaf culture and their ASL skills are so developed.”

Like Kelley, I feel the same way every time I’m lucky enough to work with a fellow Augustana graduate. The connection – the instant camaraderie we share – comes from our roots. It’s something to be celebrated, indeed.

Do you work with fellow Vikings? If so, share your stories on augielink.com – we’d love to hear from you!

Go Augie Go!

Holden Village Summer Program Planned

Augustana alumni and friends are invited to Holden Village, summer, 2012. Campus Pastor Paul and Susan Rohde are teaching staff coordinators for the summer program. They have invited a number of Augustana’s great professors to teach in week-long sessions at the village. Teachers coming already include Dr. Sandra Looney, Dr. Richard Swanson, Dr. Christopher Stanichar, Dr. Janet and Ross Blank-Libra, Dr.

Laurie Jungling, and Dr. Darcy Rives-East.

Founded as a copper mine, Holden has been a mountaintop Lutheran retreat center in the North Cascades of Washington state for 50 years.

For information and registration, visit holdenvillage.org

The Rohdes are sharing the coordination with Christian Scharen and Sonja Batalden of Luther Seminary.

Holiday Jam With the Hegg Brothers Set for Dec. 20 in St. Paul

If you saw them last year, odds are, you'll be there again this year. If you missed it, don't miss it again!

The Minnesota edition of "Holiday Jam with the Hegg Brothers," a musical evening of holiday favorites featuring Augustana alumni Jeremy Hegg '94; Jon Hegg '99; Noah Hoehn '02; and Andrew Reinartz '05, will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 20, at the historic Fitzgerald Theater in St. Paul.

The Hegg Brothers unveiled the Holiday Jam tour in 2009 and, for the past two years, have sold out venues throughout eastern South Dakota and northwestern Iowa. In 2010, they presented Holiday Jam in St. Paul for the first time, performing to a crowd of more than 500.

In an online review of the St. Paul concert, one fan wrote:

"...I was so happy to see they were bringing this holiday show to the Twin Cities, where I live. Musically, it managed to be sophisticated and super-hip while maintaining a reverence to the holiday genre. Jeremy Hegg's intelligent and humorous leadership, while restrained, still managed to add personality not usually found at such shows. In those senses, the Holiday Jam was as enjoyable as any other holiday show I've seen here, or more so."

Tickets start at $25 per person and are on sale at ticketmaster.com and at the Fitzgerald Theater Box Office. Minnesota Public Radio members are eligible to receive a discount.

The Hegg Brothers band is a nine-piece ensemble that combines a mix of vocals with electric and acoustic guitars, dual keyboards, harmonica, horns, bass and a pounding percussion section for an unforgettable evening of classic and contemporary favorites that celebrate the spirit of the season.

SWART: '... Dianne Touched Our Lives.'

Jay ... man, how the heck did you keep up with her?

Now I've never been any good at understanding let alone predicting God's will, but I can't help but wonder if God put Dianne into some sort of time warp so that she could touch the lives of more people during the time she had among us ... Dianne was a uniquely empathetic and selfless person who could make others feel comfortable, and happy and positive, and confident no matter what they were going through ... but even more remarkably ... no matter what she was going through.

We all have stories we could share, and sharing them would span hours – maybe days. I'll share one ... shortly after she had finished her first round of chemotherapy, Dianne took the UMAIE course Dr. Patrick Hicks and I were leading to Ireland. (I could spend hours talking about what a feat of strength and endurance that must have been given the state of her recovery... but that's another story.) We had just arrived in Dublin, and the students, including Dianne, were keen on getting out of the hotel and immersing themselves in the nightlife of the city (that's code for going "pubbing" by the way.) I discovered at breakfast the next morning that Dianne never made it out of the hotel that night. You see, we had changed roommates when we moved from London to Dublin, and upon moving in together, Dianne's new roommate had come to an awareness of Dianne's recent battle with breast cancer. I have no idea, nor do I have any business knowing the content of that conversation – but I do know that Dianne's cancer raised quite a few questions ... and quite a bit of anxiety and fear for her roommate. And so instead of exploring Dublin with the rest of the students, Dianne had spent the night calming, reassuring, comforting, and answering the questions of this anxious and frightened young woman.

I know some of us were frustrated by Dianne's solitary and rather stoic approach to her cancer. Like this night in Dublin, Dianne often shared her cancer with people only when it would help comfort them. Many of us wanted to be let in ... to serve, to share, and to support her in her battle. That just wasn't Dianne – she was simply more interested in carrying the tough stuff in the lives of others than she was in sharing the tough stuff in her own.

The Lakota have a ritual they call Wanagi Yuhapi which means "Ghost Owing" or "Keeping of the Soul".... It is a complex ritual that varies across families, but one of its elements often includes the decision by a family member to honor the deceased by spending the next year "doing the good" that the deceased would have done if they had remained alive.

I'm not Lakota, nor do I practice the Lakota Way. Still, if there ever was a woman who deserved to be honored in this way, it was Dianne Hammrich. Her character, her strength, her work ethic, her positive attitude, her empathy, her humility – these are the qualities with which Dianne touched our lives ... these were qualities that all of us admired ... these are qualities that are a much needed antidote to an often frightened, anxious, and disconnected world.

So I'll end where I began ... just how does someone memorialize a person like Dianne in so little time? I think the Lakota were on to something ... For those of who, like me, can whine and complain about the most petty or insignificant discomforts ... we could all use a little more Dianne Hammrich in our lives. But we can't have her back

So let's not just remember her today, let's honor her memory by "doing the good" Dianne would have done if she were still with us. Dianne would have wanted it this way.
